COMMENTARY

Saving people's lives can never be insensitive

I read the letter to the editor in Wednesday's Hourglass, in which the reader stated she felt the breast cancer article on Page 16 of that issue was insensitive and disrespectful.

I reread that article several times and honestly can't see any reason why someone would find it to be insensitive or be angry about it.

The people who provided the information were only trying to raise women's awareness that tests such as mammograms should be done to detect cancer at an early stage and thus increase the chances of survival.

Younger women, just like younger men, feel that nothing will ever happen to them, and it's vitally important they know that something can happen to them and what they should do to protect themselves.

Breast cancer hits home with me because I spent several anxious days last year when my wife and I went to Honolulu so she

It's respectful to educate women about their bodies

I have a problem with the letter to the editor in the recent Hourglass, regarding the insensitive nature of the breast cancer awareness article in the Wednesday edition. I don't get it. What could be more sensitive, decent and respectful to women than to educate as many people as possible as often as possible about detecting cancer in its earliest stages when it is most treatable? In what way did the article disrespect your privacy? If you think that it is proper to only discuss in private the techniques to detect breast cancer, then you are robbing too many women of the knowledge that could

To Name Withheld.

I am so sorry the breast awareness article was upsetting to you. If you only had a parent who had lived 10 years longer because of the mammogram you might not have been offended. You might also write to AFN and request that they remove the advertisement for the testicular cancer awareness to the men. I personally didn't find the article offensive, but then I am a nurse.

Ignorance about cancer is not bliss

To the woman who is angry about the Breast Cancer Awareness article,

What exactly did you find insensitive and offensive about the article?

Was it the use of the word breast? If so, shame on you for using the word testicle!

Overstocked fruit on Kwajalein donated to nine Ebeye private schools, hospital

By J.J. Klein
Reporter

Ebeye school children were recipients of Kwajalein Range Services straw spun into gold when 15 pallets of deteriorating apples, pears and oranges were donated to nine Ebeye private schools and the Ebeye hospital by the contractor on Tuesday.

The less-than-fresh produce in the warehouse was due in part to a reduction in consumer fruit consumption and in part "to a doubling up of orders by the supplier in August," said Alan Stone, KRS Supply and Transportation Department manager.

"The orders for produce are placed months in advance by voyage number of the ship. We had a last minute adjustment by Matson where they used V001 as a test voyage," said Stone. "This caused all the future voyage dates to be reset backwards two weeks, which meant that all the produce that should have arrived on voyages V001 and V002 all showed up at once."

"Basically, we had far too much produce on hand and it was starting to deteriorate. A new produce van arrived on last week's barge," said Patrick Zurick, Kwajalein Hospital Food Safety and Sanitation specialist. "Technically some produce had passed what would be considered its shelf life. For example, some apples in a case may be bad but others good. If it sat any longer it may all have gone bad. We decided to start issuing the newer produce and to donate the other produce to the food facilities."

The U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Host Nation Office learned of the possible donation the afternoon of Oct. 13 and quickly set about coordinating all aspects of the delivery with the Marine Department, Heavy Equipment and communicating with Noda Lojkar, Republic of the Marshall Islands representative to USAKA, and the local government on Ebeye to ensure that assets on Ebeye (forklifts, state trucks and community center) were available and ready to roll, said Alan Taylor, USAKA RMI relations specialist.

"It's great! We like mistakes like this," said Telciau Telcita, Calvary School principal.

Telcita and fellow school administrators were pleasantly surprised by a phone call from Lojkar, the day of the delivery and told to come down to the Ebeye Community Center to pick up donated food for their schools.

"Noda said, 'Come and get your share.' I was expecting Cokes and it's a surprise to see apples and fruit," said Jelton Anjain, director of Schools for Queen of Peace Elementary School and Father Hacker High School. "That's good, real good."

Occasionally, KRS will donate a pallet or two of food items, like chips, but 15 were quite a surprise said Lojkar.

Even Ebeye school children recognized the unusual donation of a nutritious items. Children from a number of schools were sent to the community center to help unload the trucks laden with pallets of fruit and then cart the boxes back to their schools.

"We came to carry the boxes to school," said Joe Milne, 14, a student at Seventh-Day Adventist School, "and then share it to [with] the students."

"They are heavy, but they are important to the school," chimed in fellow classmate Daniel Nebo, 13. "It's healthy food."

Ebeye Public School Principal Carl Jeakrik, distributed his nutritious gift on Wednesday morning, deciding the only fair way to distribute the fruit was to hand out an apple and orange per student to his school of 1,130 students.

"I think it's a good thing for somebody to donate food for students on Ebeye," said Jeakrik. "We are really grateful."

Kwaj students doing well on IOWA tests

By J.J. Klein
Reporter

High School Counselor Jaime Bowers presented the results of the 2006 IOWA Tests program to the Kwajalein community at the School Advisory Council public meeting on Wednesday.

"The message is that our students are doing well, and our teachers are doing a good job," said Bowers. "On the IOWA tests in 2006, when comparing grade to grade, each grade tested by the Kwajalein schools performed better than the average U.S. school, as reported by the company that produces the IOWA tests."

The IOWA tests were administered to students in the third through tenth grades last spring. The public can request a copy of the report from the Superintendent's office at 53761.

Bowers also shared average SAT scores for the Kwajalein High School graduating class of 2006 compared to average SAT scores across the United States. Kwajalein graduating students who took the test outscored their stateside peers in all subjects of the SAT.

In other SAC news, teachers and students are back in their classrooms in building 353 after a completed air quality report determined the air quality was good. Students were initially relocated when a replaced air conditioning unit spewed dirt and debris littering classrooms over Labor Day weekend.

Other topics presented were changes in the Ebeye

Guest Student Lunch program and the formation of a faculty committee to develop the 2007-2008 School calendar.

Ebeye Guest students, requesting improvements to the school lunch program, met with Kwajalein Range Services to implement changes to the school lunch menu. Changes to the improved lunches did not affect the donated funds per child.

"The meetings resulted in bigger lunches for the high school students, with one day of Snack Bar take-out food and a once a month birthday pizza party at the Snack Bar," said Mary Harris-Wiehe, Ebeye Guest Student representative. "For the elementary [school] students, a variety of fruit and more chicken and rice were added to the menu."

High School Principal Steve Howell selected a volunteer committee of faculty members representative of the high school and elementary school, including unaccompanied teachers as well as those with families to create the coming year's school calendar.

Once the teachers present Howell with their recommended school calendar it will be available to the Kwajalein community for review. He encourages the public to make known their feelings and opinions at that time. Howell said he hopes to have the final approved calendar in place by January.

The SAC board unanimously voted to accept, upon second reading and without changes, school policy 3000.09 Special Education/Special Needs and school policies 5000.01-.14 regarding home schooling.

Votes, by the board, to accept or deny policies become a recommendation to the U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll commander, for final approval.

Parent Teacher Organization President Wendi Gray reported the PTO raised $869, or 15 percent of the profit, from the Pampered Chef fundraiser. She also said elementary school students are participating in the Reading Instead of Television program, where students earn coupons for reading a set amount of books. The coupons will be redeemable at the Scholastic Book Fair next month.

Community Education started registering participants for the Winter A session, beginning Oct. 24 through Dec. 9. Residents can find registration forms at newspaper boxes in front of the Post Office. Community Education introduced a new feature in registering for classes. For ease and accessibility, residents can now register for classes by mail.

The next SAC meeting will be held 7 p.m., Nov. 15 in the George Seitz Elementary School Music Room.

Upcoming events:

Tuesday: No school for students, teacher in-service.

Wednesday through Oct. 28: Tuberculosis skin tests at school for students in even numbered grades.

Thursday: Report cards mailed home.

Oct. 30: ACT exam will be administered.

Nov. 1-2: Scholastic Book Fair.

Residents of family housing, bachelor quarters are not covered for loss of personal property

By J.J. Klein
Reporter

Ever wonder what would have happened to your personal property if the typhoon that hit Wake Island had charted a path for Kwajalein instead, or how about a house fire for that matter? Damaged computers, televisions, clothing and other household items are expensive items to replace without the financial protection of renter's insurance.

Perhaps you mistakenly assumed the government or the contractor would cover loss of household goods as a resident of a military installation. Think again.

Kwajalein Range Services "does not carry insurance for, and cannot be liable for damage to individual personal property caused by roof leaks, power surges or outages, flooding, mold or mildew, or other hazards," said Jeff Halliday, KRS managing counsel.

The company encourages KRS employees and family members to:

- Think twice about shipping valuable property to Kwajalein.
- Take precautions to avoid damage whenever possible.
- Purchase insurance for protection against loss or damage of your possessions.

"Historically, employees have found it difficult to find viable insurance here," said Halliday. "Some have been able to obtain an extension of coverage for their residence in CONUS. Of course, this does not work if you don't own a house."

Kwajalein residents who have obtained insurance and are willing to share their experiences, in order to help other residents, are encouraged to call the counsel's office at 58836 or write an e-mail to Wanda Nugent.

Air traffic controllers return to Kwajalein

By Nell Drumheller
Editor

In January the Federal Aviation Administration air traffic controllers left Kwajalein when it was determined that they weren't necessary for safe flight in and out of this airspace.

Once again the sky over U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll is being monitored by air traffic controllers, this time they are U.S. Army civilians.

Manager Randy Powers said the change from FAA to Dept. of the Army civilian air traffic controllers was made as a cost savings.

"The purpose of Air traffic Control is the safe, orderly, and efficient movement of aircraft. Kwajalein Tower assumes control of the aircraft 50 nautical miles away from the airport," Powers said. And while it was deemed safe to have USAKA airspace monitored by Oakland, Calif. controllers when FAA controllers departed, Powers said, "We can give much better service by being here. It is more efficient to use radar here, instead of non-radar from Oakland."

Joining Powers in the tower are controllers Chris Angle and Mike Saltzman. The tower reopened fully staffed on Sept. 26. Gary Kato is a full-time communications tech supporting the tower, according to Powers. Kato has been maintaining the tower's equipment for more than 10 years. "He was instrumental in the control tower opening on time," Powers said.

The controllers work an average of 150 aircraft a week and Powers said their biggest challenge is the wide variety of aircraft they encounter. "It is common to have helicopters and jets at the same time. Also, the weather sometimes changes very fast, and that impacts what we do."

Mike Saltzman is one of the new air traffic controllers on Kwajalein and is responsible for air traffic control in Kwajalein air space.

could get surgery and a biopsy done on a lump in one of her breasts that was discovered during a mammogram at Kwajalein Hospital.

Thank God, it wasn't cancer.

But if it had been, it would have been found at an early stage, giving my wife a good chance of survival.

Surprisingly, many women have a problem with getting such testing. Perhaps they just don't want to know if anything's wrong. Perhaps, for some reason, they are 'embarrassed' by testing. I don't know.

No one enjoys getting intrusive medical procedures done. But I'm sure that suffering from a terrible disease and possibly dying would be a lot less enjoyable.

Let's face it, many medical tests place a person in a less than dignified position. But I'd rather lose a little dignity than die from a disease that could have been cured had it been caught in time.

The reader also went on to say that men's health awareness should be promoted with the same 'disrespect,' such as having Men's Testicle Awareness Month.

I'm not sure if there is such a month, but if there isn't, there should be one along with Prostate Cancer Awareness Month.

Many men, especially younger men, are unaware of the threat of testicular cancer. Younger men are the most at risk for such cancer and should know how to check for it and see a doctor if they don't. I know young guys feel invincible. But guess what fellas, you aren't.

As for old fuds like me, I've written at least one column on prostate cancer. Old guys, say over 50, should get a prostate-specific antigen test (it's a simple blood test) and a rectal exam once a year. Man, talk about something no guy ever wants to do.

But, would it be worth dying from a disease just to avoid an uncomfortable procedure?

I've known some men who were too embarrassed by a 'problem' to go see a doctor. I've also known some men who suffered and died because they didn't.

Another one of the leading causes of cancer deaths is colon cancer.

Getting a colonoscopy isn't one of my favorite things to do either, but then again, I hear dying from colon cancer isn't a very good way to go.

If we don't discuss such things and sweep them under the rug because some think it's insensitive to discuss them or some feel that they're of an embarrassing 'sexual' nature, many more people might die who wouldn't have.

Talking about our bodies and the diseases that can invade them is not an insensitive thing and it should never be an embarrassing or forbidden topic.

Saving lives isn't a bad thing to do.

Six years ago while doing one of my routine self breast exams, I found a small lump in my breast that felt different from the normal lumps and bumps. When I went to my doctor, the lump felt so small and was in between muscles in a way that he couldn't find it – I had to help him. The mammogram didn't detect it either. Knowing that it was in fact there, the medical community persisted and found it using ultrasound. Upon having surgery, two primary cancers were discovered, it had traveled into my lymph nodes, and I was rated as having second stage breast cancer.

After my surgery and chemotherapy, I am a very healthy person today with a low chance of dying of breast cancer. I owe this only to personally finding the lump after becoming familiar with how my breasts normally felt and noticing changes in them.

Look around you. What makes you think that you won't be that one of the first seven women you see to get breast cancer? Know how to find it and do something about it.

— Linn Ezell

You should applaud the women in the Radiology Department at the hospital for being so passionate about the health of women on Kwajalein. "Ignorance is bliss" does not apply when it comes to cancer awareness, whether it's breast, colon, cervical, or prostate (for the male readers) cancer.

If there were such a thing as Men's Testicle Awareness Month, I'd gladly research the topic and write an article about it. You should know that men are not immune to breast cancer. So men, you should also be performing breast self exams. There's a bulletin board in the entry way of the hospital on how to correctly perform BSE.

Cars A pedal-to-the-metal race car determined to prove his worth on the tracks discovers that life isn't always about crossing the finish line first in Toy Story director John Lasseter's mechanically minded tale of friendship and loyalty. Lightning McQueen (voice of Owen Wilson) may be just a rookie, but he's convinced that he can realize his dream of zooming by the checkered flag if he can only make it to California in time to compete in the upcoming Piston Cup Championship. When Lightning takes a detour into the slow-moving, Route 66 town of Radiator Springs, however, it begins to appear as if his shot at the big time has effectively stalled out. Of course, Lightning's exciting cross-country trek wasn't all for naught, and after befriending such quirky Radiator Springs residents as Sally the Porsche (voice of Bonnie Hunt), Doc Hudson (voice of Paul Newman), and Mater the Tow Truck (voice of Larry the Cable Guy), the eager young racer learns that sometimes life is more about the voyage than the outcome of the race.

Little Man Fate brings a childless couple a bundle of joy — who happens to have a criminal record — in this comedy directed by Keenen Ivory Wayans. Calvin Simms (Marlon Wayans) is a master criminal who with the help of his friend and sidekick, Percy (Tracy Morgan), plans a daring robbery of a museum where one of the world's largest diamonds is on display. One of reasons Calvin is able to get inside secure areas is his size — Calvin is dwarf who stands less than two feet tall, and can slip in unnoticed where more conventionally sized people would not. While Calvin is able to get the diamond, he's nearly caught by the police while making his getaway, and stashes the jewel in a bag carried by a passerby. Eager to recover the diamond from the unwitting accomplice, Calvin and Percy figure out a way to get into his house — they dress Calvin up as a baby, and leave him on the doorstep of the passerby's home. As it happens, the couple who live there (Shawn Wayans and Kerry Washington) have been wanting to have a baby, and they eagerly take the new arrival under their wing, embracing the joys of parenthood while ignoring some of the toddler's unusual behavior.
