FROM LEADERSHIP

Transformation is not just about modernization; it's about adapting our mindsets and processes to ensure CECOM remains at the forefront of supporting the warfighter. In July, our efforts included addressing mission challenges with leaders across EUCOM, providing critical support to our troops along the border, completing a critical retrograde mission in Kuwait, and recognition for excellence through corrosion control accreditation. We welcomed several new leaders this month and our participation in the House Depot Caucus Reception was an overwhelming success in telling the CECOM story. We closed the month with transformation updates from around the command during the worldwide town hall. We are rapidly transforming and not slowing down. Thanks for your enduring support to our Soldiers.

Maj. Gen. James D. Turinetti IV
Commanding General, CECOM

MODERNIZING THE FORCE

CECOM answers the call for continuous transformation

Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

In the Spring of 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed the United States Congress as the threat of war loomed over the American people. Roosevelt had an urgent, yet simple case to make in front of the joint session, if the nation was to survive, our military and defense base would need to transform. The President identified one key technology that would be of particular focus: aircraft.

Tobyhanna, General Atomics partner to provide warfighters unmanned aircraft supremacy

Tobyhanna Army Depot, Pa.

Tobyhanna Army Depot, in collaboration with General Atomics Aeronautical Systems, Inc., proudly marked the successful launch of a critical unmanned aircraft system maintenance, repair, and overhaul capability that strengthens support for a force that's agile, modernized, and mission-ready.

Adaptive Edge: CECOM SEC's continuous integration and continuous delivery approach to readiness

Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Software readiness is critical to American warfighting efforts. That's why the Pentagon is laser-focused on enhancing readiness in a cyber-contested battlespace — it is essential for responding effectively to threats, deterring adversarial aggression and protecting American interests and spaces.
